

Information for students from Chile

“Thank you for your interest in the University of Nottingham. The University has enjoyed especially close links with Chile and Chilean institutions for many decades. Our current research portfolio boasts active research collaborations with nearly twenty Chilean universities, located across the length and breadth of the country, and covers a wide range of subjects, from aerospace, architecture and astrophysics to post-conflict studies, power electronics, and environmental science, (and everything in between!). With the opening, last year, of the 'University of Nottingham - Chile' Fundación, we are poised to begin an exciting new chapter in these relations. We have been particularly pleased to welcome Chilean students to our courses over the years. As Britain's leading global university, with campuses in the UK, China and Malaysia, we believe we have a unique 'offer' for Chilean students. I and my colleagues look forward to learning about your interests, and discussing how we can make Nottingham a part of your intellectual journey”.

Professor Neville Wylie- Associate Pro-Vice Chancellor for Global Engagement (Americas) and Professor of International Political History

“I am Daniela Méndez, a PhD Candidate in the School of Law at the University of Nottingham. The experience of studying in this University has been incredible, not only from an academic perspective, but also from a personal one. I am not only researching in one of the top universities in the UK, but I am also having the chance to share with a diverse group of people, from all around the world. This experience has enriched me as a professional and as a human being, in a way that I would never imagined.

The opportunity of doing my LLM and PhD at the University of Nottingham came to me thanks to the support of CONICYT (the Chilean National Commission of Science and Technology), which has funded my studies. My idea is to return this support when I come back to Chile, sharing my experience and implementing ideas that I have learnt during my stay here. I also hope that the project we created with a group of other Chileans students, the Chilean Society of the University of Nottingham, keeps running after I finish, to give support to the Chilean students and their families in which I am sure it would be a unique experience in Nottingham.”

In addition, the University of Nottingham offers an extensive range of scholarships for international students, including our Latin America Masters Scholarship of £5,000 towards tuition fees for outstanding masters students from Latin American countries.

Applicants must receive an offer of study before applying for our scholarships, and should also check for funding available from our schools and departments and from external organisations.

The Chilean Society- University of Nottingham-

“¡Todos están bienvenidos!”

“The Chilean Society was established in November 2016 with the support of more than 25 students (most of them Chileans, but some of them from other countries too).

Its aim is to provide support for Chilean students who come to study at the University of Nottingham and to provide a meeting point for all students who might be interested in Chilean and Latin American culture in general. To accomplish this aim, we will organize several social and academic events, such as research showcase, Chilean film series and welcoming events for new students and their families.

We think that creating this society is important because Chilean students are one of the biggest communities of Latin-American students in the University. Most of them are postgraduate students who bring their families along with them. We already have an informal network of support for each other which is really active, but we think that the Chilean society will help us to ensure this network will be sustainable over time.”

Daniela Mendez, PhD Law student, co-founder of the Chilean Society- University of Nottingham
